

BRUTON SCHOOL
FOR GIRLS

Our Ethos

Bruton School for Girls aims to create a structured but challenging environment and so encourage a lively intellect, initiative, independence and respect for others. In a forward-looking and caring community with traditional values, a wide range of opportunities – academic, creative, sporting and social – is provided by a dedicated staff, allowing confident, adaptable and sensible young women to leave the school well prepared to succeed in life.

The Aims of the School

To enable the girls...

- to experience and enjoy success in as broad a range of spheres as possible, including their academic studies, sport, the creative and performing arts, posts of responsibility and their social lives
- to develop self-confidence without arrogance, self-awareness and resilience, appreciating the spiritual and cultural aspects of life
- to develop the capacity to make informed, rational and responsible decisions
- at all times to feel motivated by their studies and to be aware of their own level of performance and progress and to realise their full potential

To provide...

- pupils of all ages with a broad and relevant curriculum suited to their individual needs
- opportunities for pupils to experience a variety of activities, ideas and attitudes and to consider a wide range of issues

To encourage...

- all girls and members of staff to be part of an active community, a “thinking school” based on mutual respect, responsible to each other and to society at large
- tolerance and sensitivity and an appreciation of the value of courtesy
- a healthy lifestyle

To challenge...

- the older students in particular to think seriously about their future plans and to provide them with the support, advice and information they need
- everyone to extend their range of experience, to learn more about themselves and what they are capable of achieving, to aspire to excellence
